CCC ENROLLEE SLASHED; ONE NEGRO IN JAIL

Third Member of Forest Camp Is Being Sought by Borough Officers.

FIGHT OCCURS IN POOL ROOM

Harry Williams, 22, colored, CCC camp No. 2, was arrested at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon on South Washington street by Constable Horace L. Bender. Williams has been sought on a charge of assaulting Levi Evans, colored enrollee of CCC camp No. 1. Williams was committed to the county jail on a charge of aggravated assault and battery.

One colored enrollee of CCC camp No. 1 is in the camp hospital, a member of camp No. 2 is in the county jail and borough police are seeking a third enrollee, whose name they refuse to reveal, as the result of a knife affray in a South Washington street pool room shortly before midnight Tuesday.

Levi Evans, 25, Lancaster, enrolled at CCC camp No. 1, is suffering from knife wounds of the scalp, left upper arm, back and cheek. Roosevelt Moss, 25, Philadelphia, of CCC camp No. 2, is in the county jail on a charge of aggravated assault and battery.

Officers Charles W. Culp, Jr., and George B. Aughinbaugh, of the borough police, who are searching for a third Negro in the case, state that Evans was shooting pool in the Samuel Stanton pool room, South Washington street, at about 11:45 o'clock Tuesday night, when he was assaulted by Moss and the other Negro who is still at large.

Hit With Bottle

The police say that one of Evans' assailants had struck the youth on the head with a bottle and that the other had slashed him about the head and shoulders with a pocket knife.

Officer Culp was patrolling in that section of town when he saw 15 or 20 CCC boys make a hasty exit, accompanied by loud shouts and yells, from the Stanton establishment. As the officer ordered the enrollees to stop shouting Evans emerged from the pool room with blood streaming from a half dozen cuts.

The excited Negro was grabbed by two friends, the officer said. Evans was then taken to the Annie M. Warner hospital by Officer Culp where his cuts were treated. Early this morning he was taken to the camp hospital in a CCC ambulance. His condition this afternoon is reported to be improved.

Seek Third Negro

With the assistance of Officer Aughinbaugh, Culp located witnesses. About 1 o'clock this morning Moss was roused from his slumbers at CCC camp No. 2 and was placed under arrest by the local officers. Moss is in the county jail awaiting a hearing before Justice of the Peace John C. Shearer. The charge against him and "John Doe," alias "Harry" was signed by Allison Atwell, of CCC camp No. 1, a friend of Evans.

The local officers said today that they have a description of the missing Negro. Highway patrolmen have been asked to cooperate in the search.

COINS

A bill is before congress authorizing the minting of 50,000 commemorative fifty-cent coins, U. S. legal tender, for the 75th anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg and the first official reunion of the Grand Army of the Republic and the United Confederate Veterans here in 1938.

If the bill passes congress and is approved by the President distribution of the coins will be by the Pennsylvania state commission, headquarters for which are in the Hotel Gettysburg.

Since the bill was introduced several hundred written requests for some of the coins have been received by the commission.

Gettysburgians and Adams countyans who will want some of the coins are urged to mail their requests to the Pennsylvania state commission, Hotel Gettysburg, Gettysburg, Pa., as soon as possible.

The coins will be distributed in the order in which orders are received. The price of the coins has not been determined by the commission.

Girls to Hold Doll Festival

Other members are Rosalind Shank, Helen Saby, Betty Prazee and Janice Harbach.

MAY REDUCE CCC UNIT PERSONNEL

$4,000 Monthly Allowance for Each Camp May Be Slashed to $2,700.

Information received Tuesday afternoon at the office of James R. McConaghie, national park superintendent, indicates that although the two local CCC camps are to be retained here for at least six months, a reduction may be made in camp personnel.

"Definite decision on the matter is expected by May 1," Mr. McConaghie said this morning. "Present information on the proposed reduction in personnel with a corresponding cut in administrative and supervisory costs is only tentative."

Limitation of funds available for emergency conservation work was given as the reason for the proposed reductions. Instead of continuing to receive about $4,000 per month for all expenses, it now appears that all camps will be limited to about $2,700 monthly, the superintendent said.

Pending the receipt of final orders on the matter, Mr. Conaghie stated that the CCC enrollees will continue at work on unfinished and carry-over projects.

May Reduce Staff

The extent of the reduction in the camp enrollment has not been announced. The present quota for the camps is 200 enrollees each. It is likely that if the staff is reduced the new administrative set-up will include a project superintendent, six foremen, and two utility men for each camp. There are now eight foremen at each of the two camps. There is no information available as to what effect the pending order may have on the technical staff now serving the two local camps.

The only information that has been received here on the proposed changes was contained in a telegram received Tuesday afternoon from national emergency conservation works offices at Washington, D. C.

LARGE BARN IS DESTROYED IN $5,000 BLAZE

14 Head of Stock Included in Loss of Barn Owned by Mrs. S. Rachel Wetzel.

FIRE DISCOVERED BY BARKING DOG

Fire, believed by members of the family to have been of incendiary origin, destroyed a large barn and its contents on the farm of Mrs. S. Rachel Wetzel, near McKnightstown Station, at one o'clock this morning.

Discovery of the fire was made through the barking of a pet dog.

The Cashtown fire company and neighbors were immediately summoned by telephone but the structure was beyond saving when firemen arrived. A nearby stream provided sufficient water to save the hog pens.

Stock Lost

Fourteen head of stock, including four horses, two mules and eight head of cattle and 230 chickens were lost in the blaze. Mrs. Wetzel recently paid $400 for two mules and a horse. A cow and calf escaped when the cow broke a chain and ran from the building. Several hundred bushels of corn and two bins of wheat and hay were also destroyed along with some farm implements. A wagon and manure spreader were salvaged.

An implement shed adjoining the barn was badly damaged and its contents destroyed. The hog pens were badly charred but all of the hogs were saved.

Total damages will exceed $5,000, part of which is covered by insurance.

The incendiary origin of the fire was advanced by the family who informed The Gettysburg Times that "the barn is not wired for electricity and Emory Kuhn, who assists with the work, does not smoke."

An investigation was begun this afternoon by James B. Aumen, county fire marshal.

JURY TO PROBE "DETENTION" OF PAUL H. WENDEL

New 'Break' in Hauptmann Case Is Not Disclosed; Postpone Action.

"CONFESSION" IS "UNTRUE," CLAIM

(Copyright, 1936, By Associated Press) Trenton, April 1.—The sensation-soaked Lindbergh case, still reeling from the literally last-minute halting of Bruno Richard Hauptmann's execution Tuesday night, was threatened with further startling developments today.

The new break, the nature of which was not disclosed, promised to come from the Mercer county grand jury's investigation of charges that the murder of the baby Lindbergh was done by Paul H. Wendel, now held under a formal charge.

The Mercer county prosecutor, Erwin Marshall, announced that the jury's investigation scheduled to have been resumed this afternoon, had been deferred until Thursday morning to permit him to inquire into circumstances surrounding Wendel's "detention" at Mount Holly in February by the Burlington county detective chief, Ellis Parker.

Three Confessions

Parker, conducting his own unofficial investigation of the Lindbergh murder in the firm belief that Hauptmann was not guilty, obtained the three "confessions" which Wendel subsequently repudiated but which were largely the basis on which the grand jury won the delay in Hauptmann's execution plans.

With Marshall's announcement that witnesses would appear in connection with the "detention" of Wendel in Burlington county, it was apparent that all phases—including the murder charge against the man in Mercer county—would come before the grand jury.

John Kafes, Wendel's attorney, announced Wendel had asked the grand jury for permission to appear before it today, and that he believed he could show the alleged "confessions" were untrue, and that there had been a "conspiracy to obstruct justice."

Hauptmann slept soundly and long last night after the ordeal that had its climax when his execution was stayed at the last minute.

Wife At Prison

His wife, Anna, also had her first good sleep in days, and went to the prison shortly after noon, hoping to see Hauptmann.

Attorney General Wilentz said he might have a statement to make on the Wendel case later today.

There was a report, lacking confirmation, that the grand jury was lacking four votes necessary to return an indictment in the Wendel case.

William Lagay, secretary to Governor Harold G. Hoffman, said several telephone calls were received Tuesday threatening "an aftermath" if Hauptmann died in the electric chair.

Approximately 500 telegrams were received from all sections of the country, he said, urging the governor to stay execution.

PARKER SAYS HE'LL TELL

Burlington County Detective Asserts He Is "Itching to Tell Story."

Mount Holly, April 1.—The 48-hour stay of execution granted to Bruno Richard Hauptmann Tuesday night followed by only a few hours an announcement by Ellis H. Parker, chief of Burlington county detectives, that he "would tell the whole world everything" if Hauptmann were executed for the murder of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.

Insisting that Paul H. Wendel is the kidnapper of the Lindbergh baby, Parker vehemently declared "If they don't do the right thing I'm going to publish the whole truth and what is behind a square deal for Bruno Hauptmann."

"The real truth is a million miles beyond the wildest expectations of the layman. I know the truth and I'm itching to tell it."

Parker challenged Attorney General David T. Wilentz to make public the confession which Wendel, a former Trenton lawyer, signed and later repudiated on the grounds that it was obtained by torture.

A Deputy Attorney General at Trenton promptly replied that Wilentz does not possess a copy of the full confession and suggested that Parker himself or Governor Hoffman, both of whom have copies, might make it public.

"Running for Boats"

"It is a strange thing that the Attorney General of the state should be interested in defending a man who has signed a confession," Parker said. "He has a man in the death house who denies any connection with the crime, whom he is willing to see crucified, yet he has a man in a cell who has confessed and is interested only in exonerating him."

Parker declared if he were conducting an investigation of the Lindbergh case "there would be a lot of people running for boats."

He described Wendel as "a clever and wicked criminal."

"He has been badly wanted for five years and because I got under him they're sore at me," he said.

350 PUPILS GO OUT ON STRIKE NEAR CARLISLE

Cumberland County Students Protest Dismissal of Superintendent.

Carlisle, Pa., April 1.—Three hundred and fifty pupils of the Boiling Springs high school went on strike Tuesday afternoon when they learned the board had asked for the resignation of their principal, W. G. Rice.

Later they returned to classes when assured Rice had not been dismissed. Board members indicated he may be returned another year.

The strike was the first in Cumberland county. Students paraded through the town with banners decorated "we want Rice." Professor Rice, former assistant county superintendent of schools has headed the Boiling Springs schools since 1922.

Uses Turned Back

Hazleton, Pa., April 1 (AP)—A living wall of striking pupils, ranged behind a taut clothes line and the American flag, turned back buses attempting to take children to the Shepperton high school Tuesday.

Three drivers tried to reach the school where 200 pupils deserted classes in protest against a notice of dismissal to the coach of athletics. They found the road littered with stones, auto tires, logs, washboilers and empty kegs.

Beyond the debris-strewn stretch 35 pickets stood behind a rope from which they suspended American flags. One of the drivers, William J. Novak, Jr., who had promised to go through the picket line, nosed his bus to within a few inches of the youngsters. They didn't budge and he confessed defeat, laughingly shook hands with the leaders and drove away.

Others Join Strikers

The other buses turned into side streets and the children aboard joined the strikers.

The pupils left their classes Monday after George Weikner, director of physical education, was notified his contract would not be renewed. They clamored for a hearing before the school board Tuesday and, although no official statement was available from the directors, each of whom was at work in mines, their families indicated the request would be granted.

The board said in a statement that the notice to Weikner was a precaution in case the state department of public instruction rejected the four-years course instituted at the school this year. Weikner's position was created under this course.

End York Strike

York, Pa., April 1 (AP)—Seventy-eight striking high school pupils at Stewartstown returned to school Tuesday morning. The pupils did not attend school Monday because the school board refused to re-employ Miss Alice Irene Fray, of Carlisle, as a teacher for the next term.

The school board elected in place of Miss Fray a Stewartstown teacher, Miss Helen Anstine. The board did not make any concession to the striking pupils. The pupils who went on strike have not been disciplined.

HAUPTMANN IS GIVEN 48-HOUR LEASE ON LIFE

Warden Postpones Execution Pending Action of Jury on Wendel Case.

BRUNO IS CALM; WIFE IS HAPPY

(By The Associated Press) Trenton, N. J., April 1.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann Tuesday night received a dramatic forty-eight-hour extension of life even in the hour he had resigned himself to death in the electric chair.

As the clock struck the hour for his execution as the Lindbergh baby killer, Mark O. Kimberling, warden of state prison, announced a two-day delay to afford the county grand jury additional time in which to investigate what he called "some interesting new angles in the case."

Warden Had Authority to Act

While Hauptmann remained in his death-house cell, the grand jury pressed ahead with its independent inquiry into the repudiated "confession" of Paul H. Wendel, a former Trenton attorney.

The delay in carrying out the execution mandate was made by the warden himself on the authority he held, even as the executioner waited for Hauptmann.

Several Hundred Outside Prison

Warden Kimberling, authorized under the terms of Hauptmann's sentence to inflict the death penalty any time he chooses "during the week of March 30," said he acted at the request of the grand jury.

With a crowd of several hundred persons waiting outside the prison walls for word that the executioner had performed his duty, Warden Kimberling faced the group of men who had gathered in his office to act as official witnesses and said:

"There are some interesting new angles in the case they wish to investigate."

Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, weepingly confident that "something" would happen to save her husband received the news with "hysterical joy."

Wife Sends Love in Note

During the afternoon, while Hauptmann was being prepared for his death, she sent him this note: "I love you and I will always remember you. I will continue to hope and you must, too."

The action that saved Hauptmann for two more days at least followed closely on a last-minute reprieve for Charles Zied, Philadelphia gangster, who was to have preceded him to the chair.

Gov. Harold G. Hoffman prolonged Zied's life for thirty days to permit an investigation of new information laid before him.

Very Happy, Says Prisoner

C. Lloyd Fisher, chief attorney for Hauptmann, emerged smiling from the prison at 9:45 p. m.

"He took it as he takes everything—in stride," said Mr. Fisher. "He told me, 'I am very happy. I think this means better things for me.'"

Mr. Fisher was surrounded by the crowd that rushed up the steps as he appeared in the door. A cordon of state troopers formed around him and hurried him to his car.

Obviously happy, he waved aside most questions and said he'd prefer to withhold any statement until he got back to his hotel.

Fisher Calls on Prisoner's Wife

At the hotel, Mr. Fisher said: "The situation encourages me very much."

He went to Mrs. Hauptmann's room.

The dramatic anti-climax of the Hauptmann case came after an eleven-hour plea for a stay had been made and rejected by the aged justice who presided at Hauptmann's trial—Thomas W. Trenchard, of the supreme court.

The plea was based on the Wendel "confessions," but Justice Trenchard characterized them as "incredible and out of harmony with the known facts in the case."

HOLT TO HAVE HIS OFFICE GUARDED DAY AND NIGHT

Washington, April 1 (AP)—Senator Holt (Dem., W. Va.) said Tuesday that, because of attempts to break into his office and rifle his files, a guard would be maintained day and night. He said all the locks have been changed.

"I want protection for the records I have gathered against certain federal officials and the WPA," Holt said.

The senator said he had employed M. D. Dean, former finance director for WPA at Parkersburg, West Virginia, to work in a clerical capacity and keep a close watch on his files at night. Holt has demanded a senatorial investigation of the Works Progress Administration.

The bones of a huge mastodon, found in a swamp near Satullo, Pa., may be removed and prepared for display as a WPA project.

Golden Rain

by Margaret Wilddmer

SYNOPSIS: Iris Lanning is at Georgia Blair's "glamorous" cocktail party, the first affair of the sort Iris ever has attended in New York. Iris has been taken up by her wealthy Aunt Phina, who has made a dreamlike shop into a national institution. Her new clothes and friends have taken her mind temporarily off her Aunt Ella and Uncle Will, at home in Persia, Pa. She is talking to awkward Camilla Wendell, who is in love with Iris' brother Owen, and hasn't the art to hide it.

Chapter 23

ENCOUNTER

But before Iris could open her letter the light caught the silver of her jacket, and Owen danced near her; he had in his arms someone she did not know, who was caught from him. He stopped beside her.

"Having a good time?" he asked affectionately. Before she could reply, Camilla saw him. Iris could feel the quiver of excitement which ran over all her body.

Camilla, taking the speech as meant for her, answered, "It's—it's wonderful. I'm crazy about parties. I'm—Oh, Owen, where were you this morning? I wanted to see you and Miss Phina wouldn't let me—"

Owen sat on the floor in the dusk, touching his sister's shoulder. She could feel his shrug of impatience as he answered.

"I was busy. I have work to do, Camilla, though people like you never seem to think so."

"I—Oh, Owen, I didn't mean to say the wrong thing. I always do put my foot in it. Please forgive me—"

Georgia's carrying voice broke in on them. "Camilla, where on earth are you? There's nobody to clear off the glasses, the tables are simply full of them. Take a candle and do it, will you?"

Camilla lumbered to her feet obediently, casting one last despairing look at her lost joys in the person of Owen, as she went.

"I wish she'd leave me alone," Owen said. "Because some day I'll get so discouraged about everything—Sigrid hard as nails about marrying me unless I drop doing what I ought to do, and hating doing it—that I'll marry that woman. And, I suppose, make her life a misery, and she's a decent sort."

He spoke, not irritably, but with a despondent note in his voice.

"Owen, Owen, you mustn't do that! I'm dreadfully sorry for her. I don't see how she can be so open about being in love with you, but I couldn't be with her and not feel that she's honest, and dreadfully unhappy. I'm sorry for her. I don't believe anybody has ever loved her or been kind to her in her life, the way she acts."

"No. That's where I got into trouble. Her mother wanted a beautiful attractive daughter, and has punished Camilla all her life for looking like her father. Old Wendell is the ugliest man you ever saw. Her mother hoped my silly designs could do something for her—if anyone can, Phina can make people look as they should—and I was sorry for her and showed it. Result—as you see. She doesn't mean to be forward, she's like a bewildered, bullied child. She has a good brain really."

Iris stood there a moment, thinking, the candle in her hand making her a picturesque illuminated figure in the dusky corner between the tall wooden Madonna and a teak table full of Chinese images and cocktail glasses.

Allan Beckley took the candle from her, set it down, and was away with her again.

"I heard you talking," he said. "I think you're wonderful. I want to have a dinner party for you. It's your duty"—his voice was a little teasing—"to attend it. I'll get my grandmother to matronize it."

He said the last sentence as if he were offering her a jewel of great price instead of a grandmother; she wondered who the grandmother might be that having her as a chaperon was so wonderful, and then decided that he was simply one of those people who think everything they have is wonderful because it belongs to them. But he was kind!

It was getting late. People were drifting away from the party, some of them speaking to Georgia, some merely piling out as though from a restaurant. There were more lights now disclosing the ash-scattered, devastated place; a couple of the caterer's men Camilla was paying for, bored and obviously hoping everyone else would go, fussed about the ruins of sandwiches and glasses and overturned chairs and rolled-up rugs.

Georgia, sharp and bright-lipped in her red, lounged up with a couple of men; Camilla trotted heavily behind her.

"Oh, are you going to have a party, Allan? Oh, ask me!" Camilla cried with a heavy gayety which Iris realized masked desperation.

"Oh, all right," Allan's voice trailed languidly.

Georgia, assuming with cool nonchalance that she too had been asked, said: "Make it a stunt party. Everybody but the host has to do tricks—or bring somebody who does them."

"I know a wonderful fortune teller I can hire," Camilla shrilled.

"I'll dance of course," Georgia went on. "And I suppose Iris does something wonderful." Her voice was soft and silky.

"I can sing—my grandmother's songs," said Iris. "In costume, if you like." All aligned and excited, she smiled up at Georgia.

"That," said Georgia, "will be wonderful. We'll feature you. Beautiful unknown, doing Songs of the Seventies! I can just see you. Remember, you won't be let off. It'll be priceless. And now, darlings, I simply have to throw you all out. Or revel on without me. Got to be on my way. Good-by, beautiful unknown! Crazy about having you!"

She was off and up toward the dressing rooms.

The others seemed to see nothing unusual in this. Some of them followed her to the place where wraps were. Others merely turned the radio to a dance orchestra number, and continued to glide among the caterer's men. As Iris turned to follow the others upstairs Camilla put a hot heavy hand on her arm.

"I want to tell you something," she said in her schoolgirl whisper. "I like you and I want you to be friends with me. You can, I don't do things to people. But Georgia does. She doesn't go out of her way to, but if people get into it, she's horrid. When she talks in that specially purry way is when you want to watch out, if she is my cousin."

"She and Allan make a sort of game out of everything. They've always had everything; they feel as if the world belonged to them, and other people were—serfs, kind of, and they kings and queens. You don't; you're real and kind, and you'll get hurt."

"All right, I'll be careful," Iris said lightly — poor frightened Camilla, with whom Georgia had evidently been severe! Camilla, she thought, had been seeing too many movies. "And I'll see you at Allan Beckley's dinner."

And she ran up the stairs. They did not really feel like stairs. They felt like walking on air.

Allan was close behind her.

"We haven't settled the date of our dinner," he said. "Would Thursday a week—"

"Grand!"

She felt for something to put it down on and pulled out Uncle Will's opened letter. As she took Allan's offered pencil and began to make a note on the margin her eyes were caught by the clear old-fashioned writing, and she read it, absorbedly, while Allan stood tall above her waiting.

"I am not quite as well as formerly," wrote Uncle Will—who, never overstated, "and your aunt is in bed with a queer sort of collapse. But Morgan manages everything splendidly, and Molly Williams comes in to work by the day and is a host in herself. We miss our little girl, of course, but we are glad she's having a good time."

"Oh, Allan, I can't come to your party!" All the fairy-tale times were swept away, and it showed in her troubled, but steadfast, pretty face, lifted to him on the stairs in the half light. "Not unless it's years off. I have to go home!"

But it was not possible, she found, so say anything before or at dinner. A burly red-checked explosive Frenchman, a representative of Molyneux, was dining, and Iris found herself swept into the conversation in her fluent, Aunt Ella-learned French. M. Grixoux seemed to like her.

When the guest had gone she called Phina back from her desk, and spoke to her with resolution, straightening up from the low odd mound of silver cloth on one side the strange modernistic fireplace. It was chilly; logs had been brought from some invisible hiding-place and were burning as docilely as most things did for Aunt Phina.

"I'm afraid I must go back to Persia, after all. Uncle Will is ill, and Aunt Ella seems in a curious sort of state, from what he says."

"Go back, you foolish baby? That would upset everything."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

HOME COMING
Along about this time of year,
When sunshine follows driving rain
And the last snowdrifts disappear,
The marigolds return again.

Much as the rich who like to roam,
Escaping winter's cruel sting,
The daffodils come dancing home
As soon as it is early spring.

The hyacinths in red and white And purple nod their heads and say:

"Tell us, is everything all right?
You see, we've been so long away!"

And thus at early dawn I rise
Once more to walk my garden bound.

Looking with joyous, eager eyes
For many an old friend homeward bound.

AMUSEMENTS

MAJESTIC
Reaching a new high in adventure, and bringing to the screen the latest and most unusual trio,
"Tough Guy," Metro-Goldwyn's amazing story of the Secret Service, is the attraction at the Majestic theatre Wednesday and Thursday.

Its three characters are a hunted crook, a boy and a dog.
Jackie Cooper, of "The Champ," Joseph Calleia, of "Rifraff," and Rin-Tin-Tin, Jr., police dog actor, are the three comrades amid the hectic pursuit and escapes in a chase with the Secret Service.

Jackie's role is his most "grown up" to date, as a youngster who runs away to save his pet dog, accidentally falls in with the crook, unknowingly becomes his comrade, and figures in a series of adventures, in which the hunted man finds regeneration through the comradeship of the youth and the faithful animal.

Today's Talk

By George Matthew Adams
THE NEGLECTED AND FORGOTTEN

EVERY once in a while, in my excursions among old books and magazines, I have come upon copies of Hood's Magazine, a publication founded by Thomas Hood, in 1843, in England. It first appeared on January 1, 1844, and ended its career a year and a half later upon the death of its founder.

Many of the noted men of the day contributed, including Dickens, Browning, Samuel Lover, B. W. Procter ("Barry Cornwall"), Landor, and others. Hood was already famous for his noted poem "The Song of the Shirt," and in his first year with his own magazine, he thought out one of his best contributions entitled "The Haunted House." In "The Lady's Dream" are found those well known two lines:

"Evil is wrought by want of Thought As well as want of Heart."

Hood also was the author of "The Bridge of Sighs," and many other poems of high merit. But today how little he is read—or remembered!
This fine quatrain by James Russell Lowell forms a fitting epitaph to his life of suffering and disappointment:

"Here lies a Poet. Stranger, if to thee
His claim to memory be obscure,
If thou wouldst know how truly great was he,
Go, ask it of the poor."

Edgar Allan Poe was neglected during his lifetime, as were Emily Dickinson, Gissing, Hudson, and hosts of other writers and artists. Upon musty shelves now lie volumes of the neglected, and forgotten, who undoubtedly will some day loom as shining lights in the world. The death of Herman Melville passed almost unnoticed. Now his "Moby Dick," and other books are hailed as great literature, though the author could not make enough from them during his lifetime to keep his family, being compelled to accept a government clerkship to earn a living.

I have a prized volume of the first edition of "Moby Dick" that I sacrificed a great deal to purchase. I have left the little pencil notation in it that indicated it had once been sold at a second-hand bookshop for but $1.00.

There are fine writers being neglected today for the more "showy" ones. I wish to suggest one or two: Rose Wilder Lane, who wrote that little masterpiece "Let the Hurricane Roar" and who has recently produced a glorious book in her "Old Home Town"; and Edith Summers Kelley, who to date has but one book to her credit, called "Weeds," which was written over 12 years ago, but which has never received recognition from more than an appreciative handful and a few discerning critics.

To have produced honestly, however, is to have earned immortality!

cent, a new high for the year, the magazine Steel said Sunday.

It represented a gain in operations of 8 1/2 points over the previous week, marked by floods in the Pittsburgh and Wheeling districts.

In the Pittsburgh-Wheeling districts normal finishing capacity was quickly restored, Steel observes, but so heavy were releases for sheets and strips that those mills are assured capacity operations through April.

ITALIAN ARMY TAKES GONDAR

Invading Legion of 11 Duce
Only Few Miles From Main Objective.

With the Northern Italian Army,
Gondar, Ethiopia, April 1 (AP).—
Italy's "mechanical cavalry" captured this strategic Ethiopian city Tuesday and established itself close to a vital zone of Ethiopian influence.

Gondar is only a few miles from the head of Lake Tana, source of the blue Nile and the water supply of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and Egypt.

A column of trucks manned by 5000 picked men of the northern army and led by Lieut. Col. Achille Starace, secretary of the Fascist party, who came here from Rome expressly for this task, clattered into Gondar.

Supplies Cut Off

The sudden southward thrust cut all northern Ethiopia off from supplies which had been coming in over caravan trails from the Sudan. The capture of Gondar was regarded as the most important activity of the war from an international standpoint because of the proximity of British influence.

The trucks had the advantage of operating over a flat, desert-like plain, baked hard by the sun. The column made a semi-circular sweep of about 155 miles, starting at Asmara and circling through Eritrea to the border at Umaga, only a few miles from Kassala, the land entry port of the British Sudan.

Victories Pave Way

Victories along the northern front in the past six weeks paved the way for today's drive, giving left flank protection to the column.

There were reports that Emperor Haile Selassie himself has taken the field to rally his forces in the north and Ethiopia may make a desperate stand in the vicinity of Quoram.

The deepest secrecy surrounded the start of the Gondar attack and correspondents were not allowed to mention the impending drive until Gondar had been taken.

Soldiers to make the expedition were selected with unusual care. All were white, acclimated to the tropics, enthusiastic and outstanding physical specimens.

On the night before the column started its dangerous thrust, Star-ace, widely known for his oratory, made a stirring speech to the troops.

"Most Formidable Air Weapon" Undergoing Tests in Britain

London, April 1 (AP).—A new single-engined bombing plane, described as the most formidable air weapon yet developed, is now being put through its final tests, air ministry officials disclosed Tuesday.

The plane is said to be capable of a speed of 300 miles an hour. Although it is yet to be placed into service by the Royal Air Force, it is regarded as one of the most important developments to date in British military aviation.

It is said to be so fast, and so advanced in range, carrying power and ease of maneuvering, that single-seated fighter planes will be practically useless against it.

No formal announcement has been made of its speed, but it has been stated that no defense plane at present in service in Britain could catch up with it.

Known as the Fairey "Battle" Medium Bomber, it is powered with a new twelve-cylinder engine, has a 54-foot wing span and an over-all length of 42 feet 1 1/2 inches. Bombs are carried inside the wings.

Carefully streamlined the new machine has retractable undercar-riage, split wing flaps to reduce landing speed, all-metal airframe construction except for control surfaces, and a three-bladed fixedpitch propeller.

bomb dropping, bomb aiming and camera work are concealed. Pilot and gunner are housed under a non-breakable "glass tunnel" which can be opened quickly for actual combat.

What impressed observers chiefly in trials of the new bomber was its extreme maneuverability.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of Ehmel H. Rightnow, who departed this life a year ago today.

You are not dead, life has but set you free. Your years of life were like a lovely song.

The last sweet poignant notes of which, held long, Passed into silence while we listened.

We who loved you, listened still expectantly. And we about you whom you move among, Would feel that grief for you were surely wrong; You have but passed beyond where we can see.

Sadly missed by His Parents and Brother and Sisters.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Dunlap have willed their $10,000 ranch on the Pecos river to the Baptist General Conference of Texas.

CIGARET CAUSES BLAST IN STRATOSPHERE BAG
Warsaw, April 1 (AP).—A burning cigarette caused an explosion of gas in the balloon Warsaw, which had just descended Sunday after an attempt to reach the stratosphere. Several children were injured.

Capt. Zbigniew Burzynski, winner of the 1935 Gordon Bennett balloon race, took off early this morning in the attempt. After reaching an altitude of approximately 7000 feet he landed near Lamza.

A peasant, rushing to the scene with a lighted cigarette in his hand, touched the bag and the balloon was severely damaged. Several peasant children standing nearby were hurt.

Verbal Free-for-All
With picturesque speech and deliberate intent to razz, the mayor succeeded in turning the hearings into a verbal free-for-all, during which his invectives so excited Representative Robert L. Doughton, democrat, North Carolina, chairman of the committee, that he threatened.

Painful Piles
Go Quick—No Cutting—No Salves
It takes only one bottle of Dr. J. S. Leonard's prescription—HEM-ROID—to relieve itching, bleeding or protruding piles. This internal medicine acts quickly even in old stubborn cases. HEM-ROID succeeds because it helps to heal and restore the affected parts and relieve blood congestion in the lower bowel—the cause of piles. Only an internal medicine can do this, that's why salves and cutting often fail. All druggists say one bottle of HEM-ROID Tablets will relieve you of your Pile misery or money back.

Moscow, April 1.—After receipt of Soviet dispatches describing an invasion of Outer Mongolia by Japanese-Manchoukuoan forces, B. S. Stomaniakoff, foreign affairs vice commissar, told the Japanese ambassador today the situation "does not permit pacifically waiting for development of events."

His statement to Tamekichi Ota, Japanese ambassador to Moscow, came after advices from Ulan Bator, capital of Outer Mongolia, that the invasion had started today, leading to heavy fighting.

To Take "Energetic Measures"
Stomaniakoff declared it was necessary to take "energetic measures" to put an immediate end to the attacks by Japanese troops against Mongolia. He said "serious responsibility" would fall on the Japanese government in case the actions of its "dependent organization might lead to the extension of conflicts in Mongolian territory."

The Japanese - Manchoukuoan forces are supported by an artillery battery, tanks, armored cars and airplanes, the dispatches asserted.

The first attack was said to have been launched against the border post of Adykodon. It was occupied and the invaders proceeded on against Tamsyk-Bulak, which is about 45 kilometers (about 30 miles) inside Mongolian territory, the Soviet accounts continued.

The attackers were said to have met strong resistance at Tamsyk-Bulak and to have been pushed back beyond Adykodon. There they received reinforcements and resumed the offensive.

200 TWO-ROW ENGINES BOUGHT FOR ARMY SHIPS

Washington, April 1 (AP).—The war department announced Tuesday it had placed an order for 200 new aircraft engines, costing $1,877,030, with the Pratt and Whitney aircraft division of the United Aircraft manufacturing corporation of East Hartford, Conn.

The motors, which are fourteen-cylinder, air-cooled, two-row radial

Dern Praises 2 CCC Radio Men For Work at Johnstown Flood

Baltimore, April 1.—Letters commending two CCC radio operators for maintaining communication between Johnstown, Pa., and the outside world in the recent flood have been sent to the two men by George H. Dern, secretary of war, Third Corps area headquarters announced Tuesday.

The radio men are Leader Irvin L. Mericle and Assistant Leader John J. Seifasek. They are attached to CCC camp No. 1,397 at Johnstown.

At the same time corps area headquarters released letters to corps area officers from Robert Fehner, director of the CCC, and Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff. Both these communications thanked the army for its work during and after the flood. Fehner also praised his CCC workers.

Text Of Letter

The letters to the radio men, which were identical, said:

"It has been brought to my attention that, as radio operators of the Army-CCC station WVH and amateur station W8MRI, of the army amateur system, you were instrumental in keeping the War Department informed as to the correct situation regarding the conditions of the Quemahoning dam at Johnstown.

"When all communication with the outside world was cut off as a result of the recent serious flood conditions you, through your devotion to duty, kept your station continuously open during a period of 20 hours and were the sole means of communication with the outside world.

"I am pleased to commend you on the excellent manner in which you so promptly furnished this information. The radio work performed by you in conjunction with other operators of the Army-CCC radio net and of the army amateur radio system has been of material assistance in the prompt rendering of aid to victims of the flooded areas in the recent emergency."

Besley Praises CCC
F. W. Besley, state forester, Tuesday said the Civilian Conservation Corps had done more for Maryland forests in three years than his department, with its usual appropriate, are to be installed in and used as spare parts for 100 new single-engine attack airplanes being constructed for the army air corps by the Northrup Corporation in California.

The new two-row radial feature is credited with capacity for greatly increasing the speed of an airplane.

Why Gulf is the Gas for April

Mr. Besley made his comment in a statement issued in celebration of the beginning of the fourth year of the CCC's operation in Maryland. Tuesday was the third anniversary of the establishment of the corps.

GASTON MEANS 'CONFESSION' FAILS TO IMPRESS G-MEN

Washington, April 1 (AP). — The latest "confession" of Gaston B. Means in connection with the Lindbergh baby kidnapping is not taken seriously in the department of justice.

Officials have expressed belief that the stories told by Means, now serving a sentence at Leavenworth penitentiary, constituted nothing more than an effort to gain temporary freedom.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the bureau of investigation, had nothing to say about Means' attempt to exonerate Bruno Richard Hauptmann of the kidnapping.

The office of Attorney General Cummings has said the department's position has not changed since six months ago when it concluded its participation in the case.

Justice officials said that Means' "theories," first expressed nearly three years ago after he was jailed for defrauding Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean of $104,000 in a ransom hoax, were thoroughly investigated and disproved.

There has been a striking development in the use of the national parks for winter sports, the park bureau reports.
